By calling at our office, 1307 F st., you can learn the names of two so-called reputable laundries who are not doing business ON THE SQUARE.

You don't have to go into a DEEP STUDY to understand the following:

PERMIT YOURSELVES TO BE HOODWINKED PERMIT YOURSELVES TO BE HOODWINKED and pay MORE for your laundry work than does your neighbor. Here's the proposition—YOU send your work to the main office or give to the wagons of these shyster laundrymen and pay REGULAR PRICES, your neighbor sends his to one of these fictitious branches or gives it to a wagon bearing the name of a laundry that has no existence and that IIS work done at greatly reduced rates, and still the work is done both for YOU and YOUR NEIGHBOR by the same laundryman. should be considered. First. Is not 10 per cent an exorbitant dividend on a public railroad company or other corporation having a monoroly of a public necessity pays such a dividend? Then, too, it is a busi-

"Second. As shown by their own statements, both in the former and present investigation, this 10 per cent is paid not on capital invested, but upon watered the contraction of the stock. On page 62 the secretary of the company states distinctly that the $500,000 increase of stock in 1806 represents, not capital invested, but money taken from the earnings of the company—that is, from the profits of the business. Three times has this been done, the last distribution of certificates being $600,000, as stated on the officers of the company in 1886, so clearly so that the company in its report, that increase its plant, issue stock to represent that increase, and then charge the public for this necessity enough to enable them to pay these enormous dividends on the stock thus created? Is that fair and just to the "Third, they tell you what we all know, that the cost of making gas has decreased materially of late years, and yet they present you figures which make it cost more now than they claimed that it cost in 1886. Then, as they said, they made twothirds coal gas and one-third water gas, whereas, now they say it is two-thirds water gas and but one-third coal gas, and that they make water gas because it is cheaper to make than coal gas.

"Clearly, they misrepresented the facts then or now. My opinion is that they mis-represented the facts both then and now, 37 cents per 1,000 feet. It has done this for years, and it is so profitable that the plant, as was proposed by the bill reported by the Senate committee in 1886. others have offered to do it for less. It is With that information before it, together idiculous in the light of such facts to prewith a history of the company's operations tend that gas costs any such sum.

"The pretense that gas costs so much to date, Congress could legislate intellimore here because of the difference in price of coal and of the residuals is equally gently. I would, however, call attention to the statement of the president of the comabsurd. The difference in the price of coal pany, on page 57 of the House report. He is a mere trifle, and in many places it is there gives the receipts of the company for the year 1893 as $1,135,305.60, and its are a regular article of commerce now, and expenses as $970,777.57. But when asked cver the country. When, as I have shown, no less than three large companies in England distill coal simply for the residto give the expenses more in detail they foot up but $869,637 (a discrepancy of $101,-140.57), notwithstanding he includes as expenses $200,000 for dividends and $89,500 for uals, letting the gas escape, and ship the residuals in whole or in part to this country, it is idle to pretend that there is no extension of the works, whatever that may mean. Even then, there is a surplus sale for the residuals. How is it that gas is furnished at so small a place as West Point at 75 cents per 1,000. If it costs so much here? Every one knows, and the company admits, that it can be furnished of $266,268.60, after paying 10 per cent dividend on $2,000,000 of stock. "If the 'extension of the works' means an extension of the gas works or plant, it obviously should not be included in the much cheaper in large than in smail quantities, and the amount made here is many times that at West Point, and most of the eighteen cities where it is sold for a dollar and twelve other cities where it is sold a permanent investment in property, the use of which they have forever after, and on which they pay no taxes; for, as stated by Mr. McIlhenny, they are not taxed on their real estate. The most that should be and taking state of the meters, and yet makes the gas and sells it to the city for for still less, as shown on page 44 of the report.

"In 1886 the company, as now, asserted that they could not reduce the price without ruin, and yet when Congress adjourned, to prevent further action by Congress, they reduced the price 25 cents, and have gone right on paying 10 per cent net cash dividends."

In conclusion, he says: "If this committee is not willing to take the conclusions of the Senate committee of 1886 and the House committee of last session, both of which investigated the subject far more fully than this committee has, especially the former Senatement of the committee has the subject far more fully than this committee has the subject far more fully than the former senatement of the subject far more fully than the subject far more fully the subject far more fully than the subject far more fully the the former Senate committee, then I beg to suggest that the proper thing to do would be to provide for a full and complete investigation by disinterested experts, to the end that Congress may have the actual facts and be prepared to legis-late intelligently and in a manner that will be just to the company and the pub-

well, solicitor general of the United States, has already received various explanations. However accurate the various reports may be, there are some circumstances connect ed with the original appointment of Mr. N. Maxwell to that office, which have never been published, which may throw some light upon the independent qualities of the man who has voluntarily surrenthe statistics furnished by the company to parties will show it beyond a question. It the House committee, and says that he is utterly absurd for them to pretend; as that of Attorney General, and which is a position always much sought by some of they do in the figures presented, that gas here costs from $1.00 to $1.80 per 1,000 feet, the most distinguished lawyers of the when, as I have shown you from official sources, in Philadelphia a private company country. The attitude of Mr. Maxwell in resigning may, perhaps, be better underhas built its plant, laid its mains, bought its materials, paid its salaries and wages, in fact, has done everything this company does, except in the length of mains laid stood if the circumstances under which he was appointed are known. Mr. Maxwell was originally a republican. He went over to the liberal party in 1872, when the liberal movement, which had one of its head-quarters at Cincinnati, was organized. He has remained with the democratic party since that time Mr. Maxwell is a comparatively young man, and is too young to be a Bourbon in either party. He was, it is believed, first called to the attention of the President and of the Attorney General at the instance of ex-Solicitor General Aldrich of Chicago, who was a classmate of Mr. Maxwell and who has been his lifetime friend.

> Circumstances of His Appointment. When the Attorney General entered upon his office he informed Mr. Aldrich, as has been stated, that he very greatly regretted that politics should enter into the Department of Justice, and that he would be very much pleased to have Mr. Aldrich retain the position of solicitor general. That Mr. Aldrich declined to do, except for so long Aldrich declined to do, except for so long a period as was necessary to enable the President to select a person satisfactory to him and to the Attorney General for that position. Some extended inquiries were made, but no person was suggested who seemed satisfactory both to the Attorney General and to the President Finally Mr. Aldrich was requested, it is understood, in the first instance by the Attorney General and subsequently by the President, to suggest the name of some lawyer suitable for the place. Attorney General suitable for the place. Attorney General Olney at that time, it is said, suggested that it did not materially matter to him what the politics of the person named might be. Mr. Aldrich suggested the name of Mr. Maxwell as his successor. He inof Mr. Maxwell as his successor. He Informed the President and the Attorney General as to the capabilities of Mr. Maxwell, and told him, what the Supreme Court of the United States will gladly testify to as the truth, that he is an exceedingly able, competent, fearless and energetic lawyer, and well qualified for the position which he has voluntarily declined. Mr. Maxwell, upon the direct suggestion of Mr. Addrich, for neither the Attorney General nor the President had ever heard of him before, was appointed to this position. him before, was appointed to this position

The Cincinnati papers, when the suggestion was made that Mr. Maxwell might be appointed solicitor general, were quick to come out with the announcement that he was to be appointed upon the recommendation of Senator Brice of Ohio, But, as a matter of fact, Senator Brice of Ohio did not know that the President and the At-torney General had the name of Mr. Max-well under favorable consideration until after the decision was reached to appoint him. Mr. Brice had an entirely different candidate for the office. But Mr. Brice is not slow in politics, and he chose, it is said, to become the political father of Mr. Maxwell so soon as he was convinced that Mr. Maxwell was to be appointed. Mr. Maxwell, since he entered upon the ffice, has endcavored to conduct it upon strict legal principles. He has been ex-tremely successful. His advocacy of the

If the reports are true that the Attorney General did not desire to have the United States Supreme Court reach an early decision as to the constitutionality of the income tax law, but preferred to have that case take the ordinary slow course through the courts, it will be seen that the policy of Attorney General Olney, if the United States Supreme Court is still three years in arrears with its business, would be that a final decision should not be reached until the expiration of President Cleveland's term of office. By that time the income tax law would have been in operation three years, and it, possibly, would not do the party in power much harm, if the Supreme Court should then decide that law to be uppersitutional.

A few days ago Senator Gallinger introduced in the Senate a resolution calling for information from the Commissioners in regard to the public school facilities of the city, in order, as he said at the time, that the Senate might be placed in possession of the facts, and thereby be able to form a more accurate judgment of the school needs of the city. The committee on education of the Civic Center, of which Annie H. Barus is chairman, has been investigating to some extent the school facilities of the city, and to a Star reporter she stated the result of the investigation as follows:

"A study of the figures to be found in the offices of the superintendents of our schools shows that at the beginning of the present school year there were 3,655 more children enrolled on the books than could be seated, and this apart from the fact that a large number of the lower grade rooms had been converted into half-day schools to meet the demand for seats. "Four thousand four hundred and sixtyeight of the colored children of the city (more than one-half of those attending the primary schools) get but a half-day's schooling. The fact that 70 per cent of the colored children do not go beyond the primary grades makes this enforced cutting down of their school hours doubly harmful. For it can scarcely be supposed that in a half-day schooling, more particularly when the half-day's instruction falls in the afternoon session, a child can make the progress necessary to keep up with the requirements of a grade planned on a full day's course. The primary grade child is really deprived of two of the four years' "The showing was not much better fo the children in the primary grades for the white schools. About 7,000, fully one-half of the primary enrollment, are half-day scholars. The white children, as a rule, stay in school longer than the colored, so the harm worked is not so serious. The recent police census of the District gives 42,044 children between the ages of six and fifteen. These years correspond with those spent in the grammar and primary schools. The seating capacity of the District for these grades is 32,689, leaving nearly 10,000 children unprovided for. Some of these can be found on the rolls of the parochial sible doubt that we have a school popula-tion several thousand in excess of our ac-
